Online databases are one way of ensuring that the information you provide comes from a known source, but how can you be sure that you have selected the right database for purchase.

This workshop will provide you with the tools to evaluate electronic resources and allow you to feel confident that the databases and websites you use fit the needs of your particular library. Whether you are trying to compare several databases in order to make a purchase decision or are wondering which of the websites you found can be trusted, the tips and tricks provided here will aid you in developing the necessary skills to make an informed choice.
